Civil Service Dodge. WASHINGTON, June 3 .- The Post has the following: "Joseph B. Fowler was dismissed last Saturday from the position o' chief of the pension division, Third Auditor's office, Treasury Department. Yesterday he was appointed third-class clerk in the same division, a position within classification of the civil service. This appointment raises another question for the civil service commission. It is said to be illegal on the ground that Fowler's dismissal severed his connection with the Government, and that he could not be re-sppointed without going through the civil service examinations. Should the commission decide the appointment legal, the door will be opened wide for filling offices with as many D mocrats as any official could desire. The head of the bureau can now remove his chiefs of divisions and dill the positions by appointments un-der the precedent made in the case of Fowier. These appointees can be reduced to clerks, the removal of the latter creating the desired vacancies, new chiefs of divisions can then be appointed and the same programme followed until any number of clerical positions are filled. This would re legal than to abs lutely dismiss a man and then appoint him to clerkship without saying as much as: "By your leave," to the President or the Commission.

DISASTROUS EASTROUAKES.

LONDON, June 3. - Dispatches from Born bay state that news has just reached there of a disastrous earthquake in Cashmere, ountry of India. The slismic shocks be gan on Sunday and have continued at inter vals of ten minutes ever since. The shock were very severe at Serinagar, the capital of Cashmere. The barracks, in which severa hundred soldiers were quartered, was com letely destroyed, collapsing so suddenly that nearly half the men were imprisoned in the debris. Fifty are known to have been killed, while fully one hundred wer more or less injured.

A portion of the city has been demolished, while very few of the remaining buildings escaped injury, many having large rents made in them. The people became panic stricken shortly after the disturbances began, and fled from the city, taking refuge in boats and in tents in the open fields. The total number of killed and wounded is not yet known our the full extent of the not yet known, nor the full extent of the damage done, owing to the interruption of the working of the telegraph wires. It is feared that the loss of life will be heavy, and the latest information from there calls for help, saying that hundreds of animals have been killed, and that the distress among the people is very great.

The terrified inhabitants are now camped in the fields that surround the town. Many of the houses, on account of the large rents in the walls, must be razed to the ground. by the relief parties.

LATER.—Additional particulars of the casualties caused by the earthquake last Sunday at Serinagar, India, have been received. forty natives were killed and eighty injured, many of them fatally. Fifty soldiers were seriously hurt. The palace of the British Resident was reduced to ruins, and the principal mosque at Sopur, in the Vale of Cashmere, twenty miles from Serinagar, was thrown down. The Carmelite Platz was filled with a howling mob, and free fights were frequent. The shops of the Jews were raided and ruined, and their owners violently assaulted. Earry Champlin, a Well-Known Young

CINCINNATI, June 8.—One of the saddes domestic tragedies that ever occurred in this city was witnessed at the elegant residence of Mrs. Nettle Champlin, 377 West Seventh shortly before two o'clock yesterday morning. The principal parties were Harry Champlin, a young man well known about town, and Dr. E. E. Loy, his brother-in law, a well-known practicing physician, law, a well-known practicing physician, whose office is at the corner of John and Seventh streets. The former received his death wound from a Smith & Wesson revolver in the hands of Loy.

The trouble was probably brought about by the conduct of Champlin, who was quick tempered and easily offended when in liquor. It seems that after taking dinner Champlin sat on the front steps with his mother, until about 9:30 o'clock. He then expressed a desire to go up town. His mother tried to induce him not to go, but after kissing her and bidding her an affectionate good-night, he started off. "Don't drink anything, Harry," were his mother's parting words. Champlin walked up and down Vine Street with some friends, and visited a number of saloons, partaking freely of number of saloons, partaking freely of liquor. About ten o'clock he started for home.

All the members of the family had retired when he reached the house. Champlin's room adjoined his mother's, on the second floor. On reaching his room, the young man began to talk to his mother, and in his drunken fury cursed her. The noise aroused Mrs. Glenn, a friend of the family, who was on a visit from Michigan. She hastened to Champlin's room and begged him to desist. Champlin resented this by hurling a chair at Mrs. Glenn.

This roused Dr. and Mrs. Lov. By the

This roused Dr. and Mrs. Loy. By the time they reached the spot, Champlin had entered his mother's room, and begun to beat her, cursing and swearing like a demon. As Dr. Loy entered the room, Champlin turned on him and, with an oath, struck Loy a terrible blow on the forehead. The men then grappled and after a desperate struggle, the infuriated man was overpowered by the miscular doctor. All the time Champlin was uttering threats that he would ered by the miscular doctor. All the time Champlin was uttering threats that he would kill both his mother and son.

After a short time Loy let Champlin get up. The young man rushed for the back stairs, closely pursued by a colored servant. Ghamplin, on getting down stairs, grabbed a carving knife from the table and started back up stairs. The house was in darkness, except for a dim light in Champlin's room. Dr. Loy and his wife had taken up a posi-tion in the front ball.

But when a light was procured, there, with uptured, bleeding face lay the young man dying. He did not speak a word after Loy's shot was fired. The agonized mother rushed into the room, her face swollen from her boy's blows, and, throwing her arms around the dead youth, she wailed "O, my boy, my boy, my baby boy!"

It required the united efforts of the members of the household to tear the agonized mother away. Dr. Loy gave himself up to the officers, who soon afterward appeared on the scene, and was taken to the Central Station. After telling the story of the tragedy, a charge of homicide was en-

It is learned that for some time past

It is supposed that her refusal, on account of his unreliable habits and his lack of any business pursuit, was the cause of his angry attack upon her.
